Offer Scholarship for Best Critical Study 'Cleopatra'

Essay Contest on Historical Film Now Showing at Saenger

MATINEE TUESDAY

Three Questions Proposed to Students by Paramount Company

With the thought that the American classroom and the film theater have much in common, and that many pictures coming out of Hollywood could illustrate in a few hours what it takes the text-book months to accomplish, Paramount and Cecil B. DeMille are offering to high school students and youthful collegians a series of scholarships.

The first has to do with the picture "Cleopatra," now playing at the Saenger theater, through Tuesday night. Hope's students are eligible for the competition, and a special school matinee will be held at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

Three Scholarships

The Paramount-DeMille awards, totaling $1,500, are divided into three scholarships of $500 each. This sum will be placed in the hands of the head of the collegiate institution that the contestant declares his intention of attending. It is available to the winner from such trusteeship for tuition or other necessary expenses coincident with his education in a period of not less than a year.

Terms of the contest are now being placed in the hands of approximately 20,000 teachers of English throughout the United States. This requires contestants to write an original essay on one of the following subjects:

- (1) The dramatist and history. To what extent is a dramatist artistically justified in changing historical data in order to make a more effective drama? Has DeMille managed to secure effective drama without being essentially in accurate?
- (2) The Cleopatra theme. Compare the fashion in which four dramatists—Shakespeare, Dryden, Shaw and DeMille—have handled the story of Cleopatra. Questions of setting, properties, dramatic action, character and motivation, varying techniques, dialogue, and other pertinent elements are to be considered.
- (3) The historical fidelity of Cleopatra. From a study of the film and of the historical background show to what extent DeMille has been faithful to history as well as to artistic canons.

Essays Must Be Original

Teachers must attest in writing that each essay submitted is the original work of a student. All essays are to be mailed to DeMille-Cleopatra Scholarships, Paramount Pictures Distributing Corp., 1501 Broadway, New York City, not later than midnight December 31, 1934.

The judges of the contest, whose decisions are final, are: Francis Taylor Patterson, professor of Philosophy at Patterson, Columbia University; Richard H. Waddo, president of McClure Newspaper Syndicate; Lee F. Hamner, director of the Recreation Department at the Russell Sage Foundation; William Lewis, chairman of the Photoplay Association Committee of the National Council of Teachers of English; Cecil B. DeMille, producer-director.

Pavement District Relief Bills Are Upheld by Court

Arkansas Supreme Court Rules Contract Is Not Impaired

AFFECTS PENALTY

Earl Decker's Conviction at Fort Smith Remanded for New Trial

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Three 1933 acts aimed at relief for delinquent property owners in city improvement districts were upheld by the Arkansas Supreme Court Monday.

Acts 278, 252 and 129 were held by the court not to have impaired the obligation of a contract between bondholders and property owners of Street Improvement District No. 513 of Little Rock, as the acts reduced penalties and extended the time for redemption of property sold for non-payment of taxes without taking away any of the vested rights of the bondholders.

The court reversed and remanded for a new trial the conviction of Earl Decker, life-term, on a charge of "wilfully and corruptly" permitting the escape of a prisoner, when Decker, a trusty guard, was sent to Fort Smith to return a prisoner to the state prison farm.

The court said the evidence failed to substantiate the conviction, that Decker, while drunk, wilfully and corruptly permitted an escape. Three criminal convictions were affirmed, including that of Lucius Newton, given a life sentence for the slaying of Euel Barefield at Gurdon.

Mrs. Stoll Seen by Passing Driver

But Clue Is of Small Help—Kentucky Woman Still Missing

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—(AP)—A truck driver's story that he had seen Mrs. Alice Stoll bound and gagged in an automobile, sent the brother-in-law of the kidnapped society woman racing to the scene Sunday and resulted in an army airplane searching for the sky.

James E. Seales, 26, contracting plasterer, reported to police that at dawn he collided with a passenger car. The driver, he said, threatened him with a pistol, and forced him to leave. Seales said he saw a woman in the machine.

"The woman in the car had all the general characteristics of Mrs. Stoll," he added.

A few years ago when the Stoll home was being built, he had often seen the young society matron, who was kidnapped last Wednesday by an unidentified man and held for $50,000 ransom.

Police blocked the highways as soon as the report came. William Stoll, brother of Betty V. Stoll, the woman's husband, dashed out and interviewed Seales.

Capt. William E. Welsh, in charge of the plane from Fort Knox secured the skies and radio station WLAS opened its program an hour late to avoid interference with any messages from the plane.

Report Discounted The mysterious car in which Seales said he thought he recognized Mrs. Stoll, vanished. Department of Justice agents did not have much hope that Seales' report would prove of value.

There were unconfirmed reports that an airplane would be used to make a thorough search from the air. Miles of wooded and brush covered country the south of already had been scoured. Much of it already had been gone over by police. Police and federal agents today continued their search of a wide area around the 16-acre Stoll estate itself. This was carried on Saturday by some 50 men.

Four days and nights have passed since Mrs. Stoll was snatched and abducted. Relatives fear she may have been killed or have died of exposure. She was ill and scantily clad at the time.

Harold Nathan, Department of Justice agent in command expressed hope of finding the wealthy woman alive and well, but said no evidence thus far has been found whether she is still living or is dead. "I won't claim any progress has been made," was all he would say.

Much of the investigation Sunday, however, centered upon efforts to clear up the story told by Seales.

Young Business Men Meet Monday Night

The Young Business Men's association will meet Monday night at 7:30 o'clock at Thompson County Lumber company, East Third street. A full attendance is urged.

In Danger

While relatives wait in growing dread, Mrs. Alice Helen Stoll, 26, above, wife of a wealthy Louisville, Ky., oil man, is held prisoner for $50,000 ransom by a kidnapper whom police believe may be a doctor. She was ill when beaten and abducted and the family, ready to pay the ransom, fears the shock may be fatal.

Workman Admits Burning of Child

Lawrence Stone Confesses Slaying Nancy Jane Constigan, 5

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y.—(AP)—Police said Monday that Lawrence Stone, laborer, had confessed to throwing 5-year-old Nancy Jane Constigan into a huge apartment-house furnace.

A tiny gold ring, a wristwatch and a few blackened bones were removed from the furnace Sunday after the fire had been extinguished.

Stone, police said, told them the girl had been hurt in a fall, and he became panic-stricken and threw the body into the furnace.

The opening day of the celebration, Monday, October 22, will be featured by a parade.

Firearms Must Be Registered in U. S.

Sawed-Off Shotguns, Pistols, Machine-Guns Are Affected

Peace officers, dealers in firearms, and pawnbrokers, are warned to register their firearms under the National Firearms Act of June 26, 1934, in a statement to the press by Homer M. Atkins, Internal Revenue Collector for Arkansas, situated at Little Rock.

Mr. Atkins made the following statement to all field deputies: I find that many peace officers, dealers in firearms and pawnbrokers apparently have not registered their firearms as required under the National Firearms Act of June 26, 1934. A firearm, for the purpose of registration, is briefly as follows:

1. A shot gun or rifle with a barrel of less than 18 inches.
2. Any other weapon except a pistol or revolver from which a shot is fired by an explosion, if it is capable of being concealed on the person.
3. A machine gun.

I am in receipt of a letter from the commissioner saying: "Pistols are not commercially manufactured as automobiles."

El Dorado Game Is Moved Up to Thursday, 8 p.m.

Change Will Give Fans Chance to See Prescott-Nashville Tilt

HAMMONS IS FRANK

Hope Coach Talks Straight About Hope-Hot Springs Game

The Hope-El Dorado football game, originally scheduled for Friday night, has been moved up a day and will be played here Thursday night, it was announced Monday by Coach Foy Hammons.

The change in date will enable Hope fans to witness the Prescott-Nashville battle at Prescott Friday night. Both teams are listed on the Hope schedule, and are always considered the "big" games for the Bobcats, due to much rivalry.

Hobbs, tackle, and Jack Turner, halfback, will be out of the El Dorado game with injuries. Both were hurt in the Hot Springs game here last Friday night. Hobbs has an injured foot. Turner is suffering with a bad knee.

Barring injuries this week, the balance of the team will be in fair physical shape, Coach Hammons said. Reviewing the Trojan-Bobcat game which was lost by a score of 22 to 0, Coach Hammons gave the following version:

"We were not doped to beat the Trojans. I expected a hard battle and a score of not more than two touchdowns. Of course, they got practical every break, but they also capitalized on Bobcat misplays to add to the score."

"The Bobcats are minus spirit when the breaks go against them. Any team and especially high school players tend to weaken when scored upon. That's something we have got to overcome, but it takes time."

Pete Brown Lost "We need a leader for the team, a boy who has a cool head and plenty of courage. Pete Brown had that. But he's lost through ineligibility, and another quarterback must be developed. We also need a passer in the backfield."

"The Bobcats are not steady in the pinches, and when the breaks go against them, sometimes are unable to think clearly. We're working in spurts and not as a team as a whole. We've got to work together, and we will as the season progresses. We've been going up against stiff competition, in fact the best in the state without a chance to experiment with various plays, line and backfield combinations."

"I expect a hard game with El Dorado here Thursday night. El Dorado is a football town. After a bad start at the beginning of the season, the Wildcats apparently came to life last week against Malvern, winning by 44 to 0."

The Hot Springs Game

A review of the Hope-Hot Springs game from a statistical standpoint, prepared by Mrs. Foy Hammons, wife of the coach, shows:

As soon as this survey is completed work is to start on clearing the right of way for the last link in the Camden-Hope highway. Assurance has been given Judge Gaughan and chamber of commerce officials that the highway will be built.

Columbus Farmer Is Found Dead in Bed Monday Morning

David Wilson, 67, prominent Hempstead county farmer, was found dead at his home in Columbus Monday morning, apparently the victim of a heart attack.

He had ridden to his farm during the early part of the morning, returned and went to bed complaining of illness. His family was visiting in Hope at the time.

The cook went to his room about 11 o'clock and found him dead. He is survived by his widow, one son, John of Columbus; one daughter, Mrs. James W. Green of Houston, Texas.

Martineau Grants Lumber Injunction

Temporary Order Made Contingent on Speedy Appeal by U. S.

LITTLE ROCK.—A temporary order restraining six Arkansas lumber concerns from violating price-fixing provisions of the NRA lumber code was authorized by Judge Martineau over the week-end at the conclusion of a two-day hearing in federal court, and the order will be issued Monday.

Judge Martineau specified, in granting the injunction, that immediate steps must be taken by government attorneys to appeal from decisions rendered by Federal Judge Harry B. Anderson at Memphis October 6 and Federal Judge Edwin R. Holmes at Jackson, Miss., October 9. Both refused to grant similar restraining orders.

Judge Martineau said that he will set aside the present injunction if there is an unreasonable delay in further proceedings in the Mississippi and Tennessee cases.

Arkansas dealers affected by the order are alleged to have sold lumber to a subsidiary of the Fisher Body Company at prices below those desig-

1,200 Hungarians Remain in Pit on Strike for Wages

Families Afraid as Men Prolong Fantastic Strike to 90 Hours

THEY REFUSE FOOD

Drawing $2 Per Week, Hungarians Demand Raise to $3.50

1200 HUNGARIANS PECS, Hungary.—(AP)—Twelve hundred coal miners—or as many of them as are still alive—sent word from their self-chosen tomb 1,000 feet underground Monday that they will commit suicide unless their wage demands are met.

They want $3.50 a week—a raise of approximately $1.50.

The miners sent up a request Monday for 345 coffins, which the villagers interpreted to mean that the threatened mass suicide was already partly accomplished.

The government was skeptical and placed guards at the mine entrance. The strike has been going on for 90 hours, and the miners during that time have been without food, water and lights. Food that had been sent into the pit was returned by the miners with a note saying they wanted to die and requesting that their children be told "goodby" for them.

Attempts to negotiate with the men thus far have been unsuccessful. An additional 3,500 miners were locked out Monday by the mine owners.

Militia patrolled the streets as the temper of the inhabitants became strained.

Propose Suicide

PECS, Hungary.—(AP)—Forty-four out of 1,200 striking coal miners, who for three days and three nights have been entombed by their own choice 1,000 feet underground, threatening mass suicide, were brought to the surface late Sunday in a critical condition.

The rest remained below, some of them dying, still threatening to cut off the air pumps and suffocate to death in the coal mine pit unless their wages are increased. Of those brought to the top some were unconscious, many raving mad, and several at the point of death. For more than 72 hours they had been without food, water, light or sleep.

Alarmed at the critical turn of the strike, the government took a hand in the situation. Premier Julius Gombos sent five trade-unionists down to the pit with an ultimatum to the men: "Come up within 30 minutes. If you refrain from lawlessness and violence we will negotiate with you."

Infuriated by the government's words the miners kept all five emissaries as hostages, men with pickaxes threatened to kill them if the ultimatum was not accepted.

Thoroughly disturbed by this incident the minister of the interior was hurrying from Budapest to Pecs to rescue the unionists, who it was feared might be killed if the mine owners failed to grant the workers' demands.

Outside the mines were dramatic scenes as miners' wives battled with police in a vain attempt to enter the workings and join their husbands. Other women turned to the police.

Meat Gives Necessary Proteins to Body

Vegetarians have made a lot of people suspicious about meat. Yet most doctors are convinced that meat has a proper place in the diet and some portions of meat are not only proper but actually necessary for the body during its development.

Biologists of nutrition recognize two kinds of protein—animal and vegetable. Vegetable proteins are not complete proteins. Animal proteins, including, of course, not only meat but also milk and eggs, are much more suitable to the body's needs.

Proteins are chemical aminoacids. There are at least twenty of these and they are found in meat. Meats also supply iron and phosphorus.

It has been argued that meat tends toward the production of constipation. The reason is, of course, its concentration. If it is supplemented by adequate amounts of fruits, vegetables and bulky substances, it cannot produce constipation.

The chief value of meat nowadays is recognized to be in relationship to the formation of the blood. Therefore, in cases of deficiencies of the blood, even in small children, liver may be given in the form of a liver paste.

This liver paste is made by taking raw liver, or lightly cooked liver, macerating it and grinding it into a paste so that it may be fed in a teaspoon two or three times a week to babies, or it may be given in other foods.

Liver may also be broiled, boiled or stewed and mashed into a paste and served on bread, in vegetables or potatoes. Some people recommend the serving of steak, rare beef, lamb and chicken to small children for the one or two meat feedings which they may have each week.

However, one specialist insists that meat, with the exception of liver, should not be given prominence in the diet of the child between the ages of 2 to 5. Nevertheless, there are children with capricious appetites, who may respond to a feeding of meat when they would not respond to other substances.

The chief value of liver and of other organs of the body, such as grains, sweetbreads and kidneys, as I have frequently pointed out in these columns, is their content of iron and the vitamins A and B. These vitamins are important for maintaining a healthful state of the body and also in the stimulation of appetite and digestion, and they are quite necessary for healthful growth.

Certainly, in all cases of deficient nutrition and in instances in which the blood does not seem to be developing properly, the use of liver, kidney and the other organs mentioned should be given careful consideration.

First to See Arctic Was Called a Liar—Greek Voyager of 330 B. C. Found His Tale Doubtful

The first man to explore the Arctic was a Greek ship captain, who went "way up north of Scotland about 330 B. C." came back home to tell about icebergs, ice-floes and a sun that shone all night—and found, naturally enough, that nobody would believe a word of his tall tales.

From that day to this, men have gone up to the frozen top of the world to see what was to be seen, and a great many of them have left their bones there; and the record of their exploits makes one of the race's most thrilling stories.

The story is old, magnificently, in "To the North," by Jeanette Mirsky. The book is a complete record of Arctic exploration, from earliest times to the present day, and makes extraordinary fine reading.

Arctic exploration as we understand it really got under way with the Elizabethans. Its incentive then was the hoped-for discovery of a short route to China. There was no such route, but the hope of it sent many ships into the ice fields and wrote a great story of heroism and endurance.

Then came the desire to tap the northland's resources—whales, seals, and the like. One of the odd results of this was the establishment, for a

Mother's Boy May Suffer Fixation

A kindergarten teacher has put this problem up to me.

"What shall I do with a little five-year-old boy who won't stay in the playground? He runs home every chance he gets. When I do coax him to stay he is so hateful to the other children I nearly lose my mind. He is this way, hear about everything he does. Won't stay in Sunday school or any place without his mother.

"My whole success here seems to hinge upon this child. People expect miracles of me. I'm supposed to know some magic whereby I can make him over. His parents are influential, too. His mother is quite proud of his love for her, as she calls it, and when the boy strikes at anyone who comes near him when he is on his mother's lap or hanging to her skirt she merely laughs.

Mother Won't Help.

"She says it is my job to cure him. And yet she takes his part in everything. I have tried every way I know to get him really interested in our games and in the other children. They seem to know I have to take extra pains with him, and they treat him unusually well for my sake, I guess—certainly not his own.

"What more can I do, I am fearfully worried lest I lose my position." Answer to this is brief.

I should ask permission to present my case to the association that sponsors the kindergarten, if all attempts to get the co-operation of the child's parents meet with no success.

You have a right, my dear, to carry on your work conscientiously and peacefully without having this nightmare of fear always with you.

Unfair to Everyone Involved

It is not fair to yourself or the other children in your charge. No one has a right to commandeer half the teacher's time in any class, or make her life miserable the other half. She cannot do her best work if her mind is concentrated on one miscreant, especially a hopeless one.

At the same time I am terribly sorry for this little fellow who has been allowed to develop a plain case of mother fixation.

No one can do much about it except his own mother, and even she at this late date, were she so minded, would have a problem that might be beyond her own knowledge and ability to cope with.

No heroic measures will work real healing. Mother fixation is regarded as a serious matter by specialists in child development. It is her problem, therefore, and not yours.

Beauty Can Thrive On a Budget!

If you have a limited income or if you're the type of person who demands full value for her money, by all means plan a beauty budget. It will prove to you how little it costs to be well groomed and will keep you from spending money on useless preparations instead of necessary, beneficial ones.

For instance, a girl who has a beauty budget wouldn't think of taking the last dollar out of it to buy an extra bottle of perfume instead of cleansing cream. She would say to herself that perfume is something anyone can do without for a few days, but that cleansing cream isn't. She'd know that a half-pound of her favorite cream is really much more economical than a small, fancy jar.

Remember that almost all the most frequently used beauty preparations can be bought in pound and half-pound containers. Your powder and cream, for instance. Rouge, nussle oil, and other things that last a long time don't matter so much, of course. Instead of sticking several cleansing tissues into your bag cut one piece into small squares and clip them together. You'll save tissues and your bag won't seem so bulky.

Keep your face powder in a metal or glass container with a cover that not only keeps out dust but prevents the powder from being wasted each time you use it. Put perfume, toilet water and cologne in air-tight bottles that won't allow the liquids to evaporate.

The Claw of the Forgotten Murder

BEGIN HERE TODAY

When DAN BLEEKER, junior publisher of The Blade, learns that CHARLES MORDEN, police reporter, has been mysteriously killed he determines to employ SIDNEY GRIFF, famous criminologist, to solve the murder.

Morden had been assigned to learn all he could about FRANK B. CATHAY, wealthy and prominent, who had threatened to sue The Blade because the newspaper reported Cathay had been arrested. Later it was proven that the man arrested, giving the name of Cathay and accompanied by a girl called MARY BRIGGS, was an impostor. MRS. CATHAY accuses Bleeker her husband will drop the charges if The Blade publishes a retraction, and this is done.

A day later Morden is found dead. Shortly afterward comes news that Cathay is dead—possibly of poison.

Bleeker tells Griff that in Morden's last report he said he had important information involving a woman but did not mention her name.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER X

BLEEKER looked across at Griff. "Well," he said, "you've got quite a reputation for getting results. I'm not going to worry about methods; those are up to you. What you want us to do is to try to find Mary Briggs—which we're already doing—and on the disappearance cases involving some woman who has disappeared within the last 48 hours."

"Correct," said Griff. "The first thing to do is to locate the girl. And in the meantime I will see the doctor in Riverview who thinks it's a poison case and will also interview Mrs. Cathay."

Bleeker showed some surprise. "I thought you wanted us to make all the contacts," he said.

"No," Griff told him. "I want you to get the facts. I'm a criminologist, not a detective. I don't go out and gather facts but I want to contact the principals. I want to watch them talk."

Bleeker smiled and said, "You mean listen to them talk?"

"No," Griff replied. "I want to watch them talk. I've found out you can learn more about a person's character by watching his lips when he talks than in any other way."

Bleeker looked thoughtful, slowly nodded his head.

Griff scribbled a number on a sheet of paper which he tore from his notebook. "That," he said, handing the paper to Bleeker, "is the private, unlisted telephone number which is assigned to you for the life of this case. Give that number only to the men who are in your closest confidence. Don't ever try to call me on any other telephone. When this case is over that number will be changed."

Bleeker folded the paper thoughtfully.

"There's something I'd like to ask you about,"

"What is it?"

"Around 10 o'clock on Monday night—the night our newspaper pulled its honor by mistaking the impostor for Cathay—a detective by the name of Shillingby was murdered. A man by the name of Decker was apparently the only eyewitness to that murder. He told his story to the police officer who first appeared on the scene and promised that he would be available whenever he was needed as a witness. There was a lot of confusion. Decker took advantage of it and disappeared. Later on you telephoned the police that Decker had come to you."

Mary Briggs, "mystery girl," wanted for questioning concerning the death of Charles Morden.

Griff watched the newspaper man with frowning concentration.

"What about it?" he asked. "How does that affect this case?"

"It doesn't," Bleeker said. "I'm representing a newspaper. Decker came to you. That was an unusual thing for a witness to do. He told you something that he didn't tell the police. As a newspaper man, I'm interested."

"And," Griff said ominously, "you're using this other case as a lever to pry my lips open, and make me disclose a professional confidence. Is that right?"

"No. Badly as I want the news, I wouldn't do that. But remember that The Blade is employing you. It's Blade money that is going to pay you. We make our money from distributing news. Sooner or later the facts about Decker are going to come to light. You'll know when that time will be. When that time comes I want The Blade to have the first chance at the story. I want it on the inside track."

"Suppose," said Griff slowly, "it should appear that Decker was unnecessarily alarmed? Suppose that he doesn't know a thing other than what he told the police? Suppose he came to me in a state of fear which bordered on hysteria? Suppose, further, that there was no reason why Decker shouldn't have vanished for a while? He had no business matters which necessitated his presence here. Suppose I put

Green Re-Elected President A. F. L.

He Is Nominated by Lewis, Chief of United Mine Workers

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif.—(AP)—The American Federation of Labor re-elected President William Green late Friday after enlarging its executive committee from 11 to 18 members and adopting a resolution describing as "biased, unfair and inconsiderate" the membership of S. Clay Williams, tobacco official, upon the new NRA board.

The federation's fifty-fourth annual convention, after shouting down attempts by alleged Communists to introduce a set of proposals, adopted unanimously the resolution condemning Williams' attitude toward labor and asking President Roosevelt to investigate his record.

The election of Green also was unanimous. He was nominated by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America.

President Green has endeavored himself to organized labor by his unselfish devotion to the affairs of the American Federation of Labor," Lewis said. "He is recognized as a great American, as well as a great leader of labor. It is with pride we note that the officers of the A. F. of L. have carried on the policies of the great Samuel Gompers."

"The death of Mr. Frank B. Cathay. He died yesterday afternoon, I believe."

"That is correct. May I ask just what is the nature of your interest in the case, Mr. Griff?"

"I am investigating it."

"You said that before."

"I am seeking information."

"For whom?"

Griff smiled and shook his head. Dr. Cooper's eyes became more thoughtful.

"I can tell you," said Sidney Griff, "what I want to find out, and that's all."

"And I," Dr. Cooper said, "can tell you nothing."

"Even in the interests of justice, Doctor, you cannot discuss a case?"

"When I have been employed to treat a person," Dr. Cooper said, "I can tell no one what I have discovered in connection with my treatment, save the properly constituted authorities, and only then when I am subpoenaed as a witness, and even under those circumstances I would not be free to divulge any matters of professional confidence. That is, any communications which were made to me by my patient."

Griff watched the man narrowly, his eyes levelled in thoughtful concentration, and focused upon Dr. Cooper's mouth.

"Only, Doctor, matters which were necessarily communicated to you in connection with the diagnosis and treatment. Isn't that correct?"

"That is technically correct. Such matters as were communicated to me by my patient, for the purpose of assisting me in making a diagnosis, or giving treatment. But you will understand my own judgment upon those matters is final. In other words, the law allows my own conscience to be the sole judge of what is and what is not a professional confidence."

"The seal might be removed from your lips by the surviving representatives of the dead man?" asked Griff.

"I believe not. It is a personal and privileged communication."

Griff extended his hand, and after a moment's doubtful delay, Dr. Cooper took it.

"I am," said Griff, "very pleased to have made your acquaintance and very grateful for the information you have given me."

Dr. Cooper's eyes widened in surprise. "But I have given you none," he said.

Griff's smile was one of calm amusement.

"Oh, yes you have, Doctor. You've told me, not in so many words, but in between the lines, so to speak, a very important fact."

"What fact?" Dr. Cooper demanded truculently.

"That competent legal counsel has seen fit to see to it that you were properly and forcefully coached upon the law of privileged communications made by a patient to a physician. Good morning, Doctor."

And the criminologist left a slightly confused, very much annoyed doctor staring at him.

Strength for today is all that we need. As there never will be a tomorrow; For tomorrow will prove but another day. With its measure of joy and sorrow. Then why forecast the trials of life. With much sad and grave persistence. And wait and watch for a crowd of ills. That as yet have no existence? Strength for today in house and home. To practice forbearance sweetly. To scatter kind words and loving deeds. Still trusting in God completely. —Anon.

Farmall Showboat Draws Big Crowd

Hundreds Throng Walnut Street at Implement Company's Lot

South Walnut street was crowded Monday afternoon by a crowd of many hundreds of visiting farmers and machinery men who gathered in front of the South Arkansas Implement company's showrooms to see the "Farmall Showboat."

Drawn by a Farmall tractor, the showboat arrived in Hope during the noon hour and promptly at 1 o'clock began its demonstration in front of the local implement company's building.

The big trailer behind the tractor was fashioned in the shape of an old Mississippi showboat, with twin smokestacks, pilot-house, and deck. Music, a steam whistle, and animated farm machinery in action on the deck, made the showboat a thing of live-wire public interest all Monday afternoon.

In the South Arkansas Implement company's lot visitors were shown all the latest models of McCormick-Deering farm implements, which the showboat, stationed at a parking place on Walnut street, was advertising.

The miners, adamant, threatened again to wreck the air pumps and suffocate in their black prison.

"It is useless to negotiate further unless you give your word now that all our demands will be granted," was the blunt reply brought from the bottom of the pit to the owners by an emissary. "Rather than suffer the slow pangs of death by starvation we will commit suicide by smothering ourselves."

were arrested Saturday, brought them to Little Rock. The sheriff told a reporter that evidence unearthed by Pope county authorities supported the murder theory.

Sheriff Bell said Nelson was married last December to Miss Mary Sue Wilson, daughter of Mrs. Stella Wilson, a widow living about five miles from Russellville. He said that immediately after the marriage the couple went to Cordell, Okla., Nelson's home, where Mrs. Nelson resided about a week and then returned to her home at Russellville.

She explained, the officers said, that she left her husband so that she might return to Pope county and continue teaching at a school for the remainder of the term. Nelson visited her infrequently during the remainder of the school year.

Sheriff Bell said he had learned that Nelson obtained an agency for the Atlas Life Insurance Company of Tulsa, Okla., last February and almost immediately attempted to have two policies of $5,000 each, with a double indemnity clause, issued for his wife.

One policy for $3,000 and another for $5,000 both carrying double indemnity in case of accidental death, were issued, the sheriff said.

Following the close of school last spring, Mrs. Nelson went to Cordell for about a week, but returned when she told her mother, she and Nelson were unable to "get along." Sheriff Bell said he had in his possession letters written by Nelson to his wife last summer in which he indicated that he desired a divorce. Nelson visited Russellville once last summer, demanding that his wife divorce him but she refused, the sheriff said.
